TRUMP'S GOP IN RETREAT

At a 2016 campaign rally, Trump promised that Republicans would win so big under his leadership, they would all get headaches and beg, "Please don't win so much!" Like everything else that comes out of his puckered piehole, it was an ego fart completely divorced from reality.

Since Trump has been in office, Republicans have been losing big time. A 241-194 majority in the House has flipped to a 232-197 majority for Democrats. A 33-16 advantage in state governorships has declined to 26-24, and a 15% lead in state legislative seats has shrunk to only 5%. A 2017 special election was won by a Democratic senator—in deep-red Alabama, no less. Even worse, Trump is the only President never to achieve a 50% approval rating since the country started measuring approval ratings in the late 1930s.

While Trump's hard-core, MAGA hat-wearing base—about one-third of the country—will stick with him through thick and thin, it seems a lot of people on the fence are waking up to the great con job he has perpetrated. He promised to wind down the wasteful "forever" wars, but he's just deployed thousands of new troops to the Middle East, and keeps saber-rattling with impulsive, destabilizing acts, like the assassination of Iranian General Soleimani. He promised to be an impartial mediator in the Israel-Palestine conflict, but has completely sucked up to Netanyahu with a "peace plan" that advocates for Israel illegally annexing the whole Jordan Valley. He promised to bring back manufacturing jobs, but those jobs have actually declined in most of the Rust Belt states since he took office. And his tariffs have done nothing but impoverish farmers. Still, Wall Street and the one-percenters love him!

As long as Democrats support a candidate who genuinely champions middle-class pocketbook issues instead of Republican Lite corporate privileges, Trump can be defeated in November. That means offering some kind of solution to the huge underemployment problem—like tax incentives for American corporations to repatriate jobs that bipartisan free-trade agreements have sent overseas. And if those corporations close down plants and send more jobs to southeast Asia? Revoke all the massive tax breaks that Trump gave them with no strings attached.

Whether Trump leaves quietly if he loses the election is another story. Can you truly imagine this bloated egomaniac giving a concession speech? He would choke on the words. But I don't believe for a minute that Republicans would support a dictatorial coup to stay in power—many of them secretly despise him too.

So Trump may huff and puff if he loses the election. He may challenge it in the media and the courts. And he may have to be dragged kicking and snorting out of the White House. But it will happen. Actually, I can't think of any other scene that would make for a better day!

GLOBAL INEQUALITY WORSENS

A HUMAN RIGHTS ORGANIZATION SAYS THE WORLD'S BILLIONAIRES SHOULD PONY UP TO ALLEVIATE THE VAST WEALTH GAP.

A million bucks or a billion, what's the difference? World domination!

Most of us still think that having a million dollars makes a person very wealthy, but of course the reality is that's just chump change for some folk. Add three zeros, and you're talking real money and real clout, as personified by the 2,153 billionaires who now represent the greatest concentration of economic and political power the world has ever known.

"Global inequality is shockingly entrenched and vast," declared Oxfam International—a premier human rights organization focusing on alleviating poverty—in its latest annual report. Titled "Time to Care," the exhaustive report also stated, "The number of billionaires has doubled in the last decade."

With economic power comes every other kind. According to the 2019 list of billionaires in Forbes magazine, Jeff Bezos holds the top spot at $131 billion. Bezos owns The Washington Post, in addition to his holdings as the founder of Amazon, the world's mightiest retailer. Amazon controls the planet's biggest swath of personal information storage and has cloud-computing deals with the CIA and other government agencies worldwide.

Mexican billionaire Carlos Slim Helú—fifth on the list with $64 billion—stepped in to bail out The New York Times when it was in deep trouble. And there's Michael Bloomberg, a media magnate who has recently emerged as a 2020 candidate for U.S. President against incumbent Donald Trump. With less than four big bills, Trump is way down the list of the world's billionaires, at 766, while the avowedly more liberal Bloomberg is worth $55.5 billion, putting him ninth on the Forbes list of the richest of the rich.

Throw in Bill Gates, Mark Zuckerberg and Warren Buffett, and you get an accurate portrait of the small club that runs the world's financial, political and cultural realms. For the most part, members of the billionaire class are not absentee investors. Rather, they are actively involved in businesses—from Microsoft and Facebook to Google to Koch Industries Inc.—that shape every aspect of life, for better or worse, on this planet.

In these times of climate change alarm thanks to the incessant rape of Mother Earth to make big bucks, the most profitable industries are unquestionably the major threat to human survival. However, a number of billionaires have been outspoken in their concern about the dangers to life on this planet, including those posed by ever-sharpening class divisions.

Embracing a sense of social justice, such billionaires—most notably Buffett and Gates—support legitimate charitable enterprises, but that kindheartedness hasn't resulted in any serious redistribution of wealth. As Oxfam International's "Time to Care" report on global inequality concluded, just 22 of these guys still have—after their sizable charitable donations—"more wealth than all of the women in Africa."

Moreover, the frightening report noted, "The world's 2,153 billionaires have more wealth than the 4.6 billion people who make up 60% of the planet's population" combined.

Yes, global inequality is rapidly rising. Even the planet's richest individuals are at risk, and they should heed these words of warning from Oxfam India CEO Amitabh Behar: "Our broken economies are lining the pockets of billionaires and big business at the expense of ordinary men and women. No wonder people are starting to question whether billionaires should even exist."

The Oxfam report went on to state the obvious: The billionaires are digging their own graves no matter how lavish the tombstones they've paid to place over themselves. The enormous power of their wealth has enabled them to manipulate governments to enact policies favoring the superrich, but they have—just like the pharaohs, emperors and kings of old—gone way too far.

That excess of greed has created a worldwide populist sentiment for governments to claw some of that wealth back to serve the public interest. "Governments created the inequality crisis—they must act now to end it," Behar said in a press release. "They must ensure corporations and wealthy individuals pay their fair share of tax and increase investment in public services and infrastructure."

Otherwise, it's pitchforks and eat the rich as planet Earth expires.

ASSASSIN NATION

TRUMP PULLS THE TRIGGER ON WAR CRIMES AFTER A DECADES-LONG BAN ON U.S.-SANCTIONED ASSASSINATIONS OF FOREIGN LEADERS.

For the past three years the Trump Administration has rolled back or plowed over decades of federal rules, regulations and statutes. On January 3, 2020—when the President ordered a drone strike on a top Iranian general near Baghdad's airport—he crossed a Rubicon that even his fiercest critics hadn't expected. In apparent violation of domestic and international law, Donald Trump blew up our nation's four-decade ban on government-sanctioned political assassinations.

In late 1974, just months after impeachment proceedings and the eventual resignation of President Richard Nixon, The New York Times published a landmark investigative report. It detailed covert CIA operations involving assassination attempts on foreign leaders and the undermining of foreign governments.

To probe abuses by the CIA, NSA, FBI and IRS, the U.S. Senate Select Committee to Study Governmental Operations With Respect to Intelligence Activities—better known as the Church Committee—was convened in 1975. Chaired by Senator Frank Church (D-Idaho), the task force went to work at a time when the U.S. government still seemed to function as designed—at least in part—to marshal reforms in the wake of chaos after the unprecedented resignations of a President and his Vice President. (Spiro Agnew left office in 1973.) The committee's investigation culminated with a report declaring that government-sanctioned assassination was "incompatible with American principle, international order and morality."

In 1976, based on the Church Committee's recommendation, President Gerald Ford issued an executive order prohibiting government-sanctioned assassinations in the absence of war or imminent danger. That order remains in effect today—if only in theory.

Subsequent Presidents—from Ronald Reagan to Bill Clinton to George W. Bush to Barack Obama—would chip away at the margins of Ford's edict while offering increasingly expansive legal justifications for each incremental rollback. In the fraught aftermath of Trump's decision to assassinate Iran's Major General Qasem Soleimani, Professor Karen J. Greenberg detailed what brought us to this moment.

In a New York Times op-ed she explained that "Ronald Reagan, reportedly claiming to act 'in good faith' and within the context of an 'approved operation,' launched a failed attack" on a Lebanese cleric. "The Clinton Administration, in considering plans for targeting Osama bin Laden, determined it would be an act of self-defense, and therefore not an assassination."

Greenberg—an expert on national security law—added, "After the attacks of September 11, 'targeted killings' became the new rubric employed to bypass the ban on assassinations." Bush and Obama expanded executive powers to authorize drone strikes. Obama even went so far as to unilaterally expand executive authority to allow for the drone killing, in Yemen, of a fugitive U.S. citizen who was an al-Qaeda ideologue.

Bush and Obama sustained Ford's ban, if by targeting only nonstate actors in the post-9/11 "War on Terror." But Trump blew away all pretense with the brazen attack on Soleimani—Iran's second-most powerful figure—and several Iraqi officials escorting the revered general on a peace mission in Baghdad.

"The policies in the War on Terror got us here," Greenberg told me, but "Trump is very much a game-changer." Whereas Bush and Obama couched their policies in careful legalisms, Trump—just days after being charged with two articles of impeachment in the U.S. House of Representatives—smashed open Pandora's box with an unlawful act that brought the globe to the brink of World War III.

"A successful attempt to attack a leading member of a sovereign state," Greenberg said, "distinguishes, in many ways, from what the Obama Administration had done." The former President's policies "essentially bypasse[d] the idea of laws that restrain. It's a lack of foresight to put in place policies, by any President or any administration, that—should it get into the wrong hands—can prove truly dangerous. We've now crossed that threshold."

Greenberg warned, "The bottom line is this is not something that the United States has supported or allowed since the Church Committee. Presidents have signed the assassination ban, sometimes expanding it and have for the most part adhered to it." But no longer.

Following Soleimani's assassination, the Trump Administration argued it was lawfully carried out as an act of self-defense to forestall an "imminent threat" that was set to kill as many as 100 Americans. If true, the claim might have inoculated the White House from charges of violating U.S. and international law.

However, at a fund-raiser soon after the attack, Trump was heard telling supporters he ordered it because Soleimani was "saying bad things about our country." Without citing any threat against the U.S., Trump bristled, "How much of this shit do we have to listen to?"

With Trump's ever-shifting explanations and an inability of top Cabinet members and military officials to present Congressional lawmakers any evidence of an imminent attack, the charge that Soleimani's assassination was an act of "state terrorism"—a war crime—is impossible to rebut.

"Anybody who says that this was done in a way to create more security for American interests is definitely wrong," Greenberg argued. "We are now on a much more dangerous precipice than prior to this killing." Sadly, the threats we now face come not only from Iran and sworn enemies of our country, but also emanate from within the White House itself.

MARSHA BLACKBURN

The United States Congress is home to some of the most intelligent, educated, principled public servants in the nation, and also some of the dumbest, most ignorant, dishonest twits on the whole planet. In the former category, members of both parties are to be found, although differing on policies, philosophy and solutions to the country's problems. But members of the second category—the ignoramuses who'd be better employed as used car salesmen—almost exclusively belong to the Republican Party.

From Dan Quayle to George W. Bush, from Sarah Palin to the current blowhard in the White House (who can't even pronounce the word origins correctly—he said "oranges" twice in a single press conference), we have a parade of dimwits who habitually misspell words that most fifth-graders get right, mangle sentences as if they were just learning English, and exhibit a profound ignorance of basic historical, scientific and legal knowledge. As Bill Maher said, "If Sarah Palin suffers a stroke, how will we know?" The same could be said of Tennessee's junior U.S. senator, Marsha Blackburn.

The first clue that Blackburn might not be the brightest bulb in the pack is her "education" at Mississippi State University, earning a B.S. in home economics. Home economics? A major in college? We thought that went out with hoop skirts, bobby socks and big tail fins on stretch Cadillacs. She's also a former beauty pageant winner, director of retail fashion and now the owner of Marketing Strategies, a promotional event and "image consulting" firm. Not exactly the kind of résumé that develops expertise in anything akin to federal legislation.

Conservatives like to point out that Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, the popular Democratic House representative from Queens, worked as a waitress/bartender before getting elected. True, but she also graduated cum laude from Boston University with a degree in international relations and economics—not the home version, but the kind that determines the prosperity of whole nations. Yes, education does matter if you're going to be passing complex laws that govern a nation. But Blackburn's shallow résumé does qualify her as a living Barbie Doll to represent all the humble folk who believe the only book you need to be versed in is the Holy Bible.

Yes, Marsha is a God-fearing Bible thumper and "hard-core, card-carrying Tennessee conservative," in her own words, and she's damned proud to be called a wingnut. Her motto is "no compromise, no apologies," just the perfect attitude in a field—politics—that has forever been characterized by the "art of compromise." But she should add a third line to her motto: "no respect for truth."

Blackburn is dead set against reproductive rights for women. When campaigning for her Senate seat in 2018, she ran an ad claiming that she had "fought Planned Parenthood, and we stopped the sale of baby body parts." Twitter banned the ad because it was a lie; women who have abortions at Planned Parenthood may opt to have fetal tissue donated for medical research to prevent diseases like Parkinson's and HIV, but PP does not sell fetal tissue for profit. She lied again when claiming that 94% of Planned Parenthood's business involves abortion. According to FactCheck.org, the actual total is a mere 3%, the rest devoted to contraception, pregnancy tests, prenatal services, cancer screening and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases.

She told still more lies when arguing for the repeal of Obamacare, stating that two popular provisions—protections for preexisting conditions and allowing children to be on their parents' health plans until the age of 26—were Republican amendments to the act. Actually, the Republicans had nothing to do with it, except opposing the entire Affordable Care Act with every fiber of their beings. For the many Americans still without health insurance, Marsha offers an alternative plan: Just pray to Dr. Yahweh, and maybe He'll cure you, if He's not too overbooked with the other 7.8 billion humans on Earth.

Continuing her one-woman crusade to sabotage the health of American citizens, Blackburn cosponsored a bill that revised the DEA's legal standard of "imminent danger" for enforcement action against opioid manufacturers, impeding the agency's ability to stop black-market sales by drug distribution companies. We have an opioid addiction and death crisis worse than anything perpetrated by the Mexican drug cartels, and all this bimbo can think of is legislation hobbling the cops' ability to nail Big Pharma bastards!

It comes as no surprise that the stupid bitch thinks biological evolution is a crackpot theory and that the overwhelming consensus of the scientific community about man-made climate change is "unproven." In 2015 she said, "The jury is still out saying man is the cause for global warming, after the Earth started to cool 13 years ago." Apparently, nearly the whole state of California, the whole continent of Australia and enormous swaths of the Amazon all going up in smoke due to excess heat and drought last year have done nothing to rid Blackburn of this idiotic delusion.

Taylor Swift was so pissed off by Blackburn's voting record as a House representative that she abandoned her non-political stance to actively oppose Blackburn's run for Senate. In a new documentary, Miss Americana, Swift says, "She [Blackburn] votes against the reauthorization of the Violence Against Women Act, which is just basically protecting us from domestic abuse and stalking. Stalking. She thinks that if you're a gay couple, or even if you look like a gay couple, you should be allowed to be kicked out of a restaurant.... Those aren't Tennessee Christian values. I live in Tennessee. I am Christian. That's not what we stand for."

Indeed, Blackburn voted against all those things, along with the Lily Ledbetter Fair Pay Act and the Paycheck Fairness Act to address the disparity in pay for women doing the same work as men. She voted against the Employment Non-Discrimination Act that bans discrimination against LGBTQ employees, and for a Constitutional amendment to ban same-sex marriage. She has an astounding 0% rating from the Human Rights Campaign.

Like many of her Tea Party colleagues, Marsha doesn't take the whole business of governing seriously, because government is really the devil's work. In the Trump impeachment trial, with all senators sworn by oath to be impartial and attentive judges, Blackburn played hooky to bloviate her nonsense on Fox News. At other times she was seen reading a book by another wingnut defending her lie-of-the-day role model, Trump. Although it's not confirmed, she may also have been knitting macramé, doing her nails or taking a prayer nap.

While posturing as a vestal virgin of right-wing purity, Marsha moonlights as a get-down-and-dirty hooker for any corporate john ready to pony up the big bucks. She's against net neutrality—a level playing field for all internet content producers—because it's "socialistic." She's supported bills that would prohibit cities from creating their own more affordable broadband networks to compete with the price-gouging monopolies we have now. She tried to ax an Obama regulation requiring all internet providers to obtain users' permission before selling their browsing data to the highest bidder. Fuck your privacy, pal! As of 2017 the big telecoms had tucked almost $700,000 into her garter belt as campaign contributions.

Yeah, baby! Miss Humble Home Economics is really a stiletto-heeled, bodice-bursting Vegas pro who could suck the chrome off a trailer hitch—as long as there's a big corporate logo on the tailgate!

Secret shame no more! If ever you've fantasized about the sweet caress of a Martian digit as it prepares your anal probe, you're not alone. Like, the opposite of alone…you're in very good company, so much so that some people are wondering what to make of it all. The truth is out there, and it cums in peace.

Purveyors of pirated content Pornhub released their 2019 "insights" in January, and coming in at the number two spot is a close encounter of the wait…what? kind: You're all a bunch of alien sex fiends!

Formally classified as exophilia, the phenomenon of being aroused by alien or nonhuman beings/entities—and the sexing thereof—is nothing new, but its recent surge in popularity among porn enthusiasts begs the question why? And what aliens or robots are we talking about here? One step at a time, folks.

"Searches for 'Area 51' went from zero to 160,000 over a four-day period last July, when the Area 51 event was making headlines," PornHub reported. Area 51, of course, is the fabled secret military installation in Nevada that was a test site for experimental aircraft at the height of the Cold War. Conspiracy theorists claim that the site hosts an alien spacecraft, along with the bodies of the aliens onboard, after they crashed at Roswell, New Mexico, in 1947. The U.S. government maintains there were no aliens and that the crashed craft in question was merely a weather balloon. Or was it?! (It probably was).

Millions of people had responded to a "joke" Facebook post ("They Can't Stop All of Us") urging people to storm the facility on September 20 and, in no uncertain terms, "see them aliens." There was a momentary concern that this might come to fruition, but those fears were allayed when everyone came to their senses and continued eating Cheetos on the couch.

Circling back to the why, it's not complicated: We're driven by what's topical in our lives. Look at a search algorithm from the day Stormy Daniels became a household name. Or the week after Shades of Grey hit theaters. You see where we're going with this? Aliens, though…that begs further analysis. Ready the probe!

WHEN GOAT-NAPPING GOES WRONG

First things first, be assured that this story ends up okay…unless you count one man's crippling meth addiction. And his even more crippling bad judgment. Or the tattered remains of his friendship with a goat who shall remain nameless. We'll start at the beginning.

While the rest of us were sleeping off our New Year's Eve escapades, Brandon Kirby had a date with destiny. Fueled by meth and insanity, Kirby kicked off 2020 with a good old-fashioned carjacking—but is it carjacking if the occupants are asleep? Or if one of the occupants is a goat, for that matter?

The car, or pickup truck in this case, was in the parking lot of an adult store in Carthage, Missouri, which is a whole other tangent that we'll deal with another day. Right now all that matters is how on New Year's Day, Kirby—armed and fucked out of his head—unknowingly kidnapped a sleeping passenger and his goat.

To recap, the driver was in the adult store, and his friend was asleep in the car, accompanied by a goat. Then all hell broke loose.

How does the goat fit into all of this? Let's put a pin in that for now. As carjackings go, it wasn't the friendliest experience, as the unwitting passenger awoke to a brisk pistol-whipping before Kirby led them on a whimsical road trip that crossed two state lines. They drove 130 miles, through Missouri and Kansas, before the carjacker kicked his terrified cargo to the curb somewhere in Oklahoma.

Now, there are certain questions we can't answer at this point: Was the adult store Christie's Toy Box on Range Line Road or Vegas Video & Temptations Spa? And what was the driver doing there? If it was Christie's, then perhaps he was there based on this stellar Yelp review: "Tbh it's a 10/10 store, got police cuffs for my nephew and he loves them!!! Also the dildo was stellar there." If it was Vegas Video & Temptations Spa, perhaps he was inquiring about hot tub capacity or group rates.

Furthermore, why was the goat in the truck, who was he with, and how did he get back to Missouri? So many question marks hang over this story, but at least we have some closure in the form of an epic police takedown.

Apparently, officers in pursuit tapped the truck's OnStar system to slow it down, blew its tires with a spike trap, then used patrol cars to force him into a ditch, whereupon he fled on foot before finally being apprehended. And to no one's surprise, he was already wanted for second-degree burglary.

PRACTICE WHAT YOU PREACH

Okay, it's no bombshell reveal that the South, with all its finger-wagging and moral hooha, is just as horny as the rest of us, but it's always worth revisiting this factoid with due regularity, if only to remind the hypocrites that they have no fucking business telling people what they can or cannot do with their own bodies.

So let's get to it! A recent study shows that porn consumption is highest among states on the religious, conservative end of the spectrum. So says Archives of Sexual Behavior, a journal that employed the mind-bending power of Google Trends to reach its conclusion.

As reported by The Daily Beast, an older study conducted by Homegrown Video unearthed some surprising—though let's not kid ourselves here, not surprising—results, namely how a hefty one-third of their amateur sex tape submissions were coming from south of the Mason-Dixon.

In her 2003 book, Sex in the South: Unbuckling the Bible Belt, author Suzi Parker paints a portrait of mint julep-tinged decadence: iron belles (muscle fantasy), bondage clubs, aqua porn, swingers' soirees, BBW parties and buying double-ended dildos at a passion party in Maumelle, Arkansas. I do declare!

Further, note that in 2015 the movie that took a giant fucking shit on BDSM—50 Shades of Grey—racked up more ticket preorders in Mississippi than any other state in the union. And as for religion, let's give a quick shout out to the very real ChristianSwingers.com, a website dedicated to matching "devout Christian couples who still want to have an active love life and share it with another, in good faith." Can I get an amen?

YOU HAD ME AT CREAM PIE

It's not easy being a McDonald's franchise owner. Between slumping sales and the imminent transition to a plant-based menu, the brand is struggling to remain relevant in an age where the popularity of colon-clogging death sludge is on the wane.

In Japan the chain has taken drastic—some would argue desperate—steps to attract consumers, from launching a raft of new burgers to pretentious pop-up locations outfitted with linen and silverware. But these facile stunts pale in comparison to the introduction of a new dessert and its unintentionally awesome butchered translation.

The Otona no Pie resembles the McDonald's apple pie in shape and comes with a rich, gooey filling—your choice of chocolate or vanilla. On paper this sounds like a winner, but we've all seen enough restaurant menu typos to know just how lost things can get in translation.

Turns out that Otona no Pie, directly translated, is "Adult Cream Pie" in English. The Japanese version is surely meant to evoke a sense of luxury, but anyone reading this knows that here in the good old USA, it refers to the delivery of a payload in any one of three holes. So maybe delay the North American launch until this is sorted out?

Of course, this anecdote is part of a rich tradition that has supplied no shortage of double-takes and snickers over the innocent yet gut-bustingly hilarious branding fails from around the world. If ever you're in Romania, be sure to grab a piping hot cup of Urinal tea; in Japan, feast on Soup for Sluts, then chase it down with some Child Shredded Meat. In Peru they have Man Goo mangoes, while folks in China like to quench their thirst with an ice-cold can of Jew's Ear Juice.

And that's just snack food—for more good times, Google "T-shirt translation fails." You're welcome.

BOOBS SAVE KOALA BEARS!

One billion animals dead. Over 12 million acres of land up in flames. The Australia wildfires, still burning at press time, have caused untold destruction and suffering. So when the government was slow to step in, sex workers endeavored to teach the world a lesson in compassion and direct action.

Models have been leveraging their online presence to raise much-needed funds for relief and rescue efforts. A Mic.com article attributes the movement to one Kaylen Ward, a 20-year-old Instagram/OnlyFans beauty who offered up nude photos to followers for every $10 donation to a charity that benefitted wildfire recovery. As of January 6, she claimed to have broken the $1M mark. Basic math dictates that she might well have sold up to 100,000 nudes!

"I raised [$1 million] for Australia at the sake of my naked body being exposed on the internet to millions and millions of people," she wrote on Twitter. "That's a scary feeling, to be that vulnerable and exposed to the world. But I did it because I wanted to do something good."

Funny how a community that is under constant assault can come together and show us all up. Model Emmy Elliot followed Ward's lead and claims to have responded to over 5,000 donations, and counting, for a total of $50,000. Similarly, Instagram model Jenna Lee clocked in at an impressive $40,000.

Of course, leave it to the social media fascista to piss on the parade. Ward had her Instagram account disabled and even suffered repercussions in her personal life due to the massive exposure of her efforts, but she remains uncowed in her dedication to helping those who can't help themselves.

"My family disowned me, and the guy I like won't talk to me all because of that tweet," she said in another post. But "Fuck it, save the koalas." Selfless and sexy. Please, go sign up for her OnlyFans site today and support this magnanimous goddess (search: kaybaby1). You can follow Kaylen on her new Instagram account @NakedPhilanthropist or on Twitter @LilEarthAngelK.

(SENSITIVE) STUDS FOR HIRE

You don't hear as much lore and chatter about male escorts because, let's face it, most women don't have to try as hard to get laid. That's not to say that there is anything wrong with women who choose to pay for sex, the benefits of which are numerous (it's so nice when they don't hang around after).

But one sex historian happened upon an interesting factoid about escorts in the modern era that may see their stock rise in this current climate of Harvey Weinstein and Oval Office pussy grabbers. Behold, the dawn of male escorts for the #MeToo era.

As reported by the New York Post, Hallie Lieberman—writing for Buzzfeed News—reveals a growing niche in male escort circles, where feminist-leaning hunks provide more than just a hard cock and sexual release; they're ready to listen.

Lieberman uses Levi, an escort who lives in California, as an example in distinguishing between female and male service providers, the latter of which she claims are required to do much more "emotional labor."

Which is interesting, because on average a male service provider can only get away with charging approximately half of what his female counterpart costs (please refer back to the intro regarding supply and demand). And while it's tough to muster any sympathy for a man who makes less than a woman, it is nonetheless admirable that Levi offers a money-back guarantee if a client doesn't orgasm. That's just good customer service.

His number-one fear is coming off as "creepy" (what a sensitive soul!), and he describes his approach as that of a second or third date, where rapport and chemistry come together like hot fudge on a soft-serve sundae. He has a roster of regulars and is never wanting for work, so clearly this Boy Scout with a boner is doing something right.

But being nice does not imply an absence of boundaries—especially when they cross the line from kinky to "Nope." Take Marco, a male service provider in London who turned down a gig because the husband wanted to watch him have sex with his wife—wait for it—while he sniffed Marco's socks.

Eye-watering exceptions aside, it appears that "[succeeding] in this particular line of work would require at the very least an inherently feminist mind-set," Lieberman explains, "which is to say, the attitude that women deserve just as much pleasure, respect and freedom as men, in or out of bed." What a concept: escort equity. Welcome to 2020!

TOMBOY

DAVE NAZ

I'm a very free spirit, definitely spontaneous. Very much a tomboy. I'm also a giver, which is my best and worst trait. I love snowboarding, dirt biking and boating. My favorite food is cheese, like every single kind, and I'm an amazing cook. I've been going to music festivals since I was 12, and I love crocheting.

"Before I was scouted, I was never a stripper or cam model—I was actually working as a housemaid at a resort. I thought it would be fun to have a change of scenery in L.A. Never thought I'd do as well as I have, honestly, and I love it! I literally get to be exactly myself 24/7. It's the best feeling in the world.

"My most memorable sex? One time I came home and there were rose petals on the ground, candles lit and a warm bath running for me. Another time there was a new collar, some toys and an outfit laid out for me to wear. Both made me feel really special. And though I've explored most of my fantasies, there's still one I need to fulfill: I've always wanted to have sex with a set of identical twins. I think that would be quite something else."

KENNETH PLAY

SEX HACKS FOR ALL

BY T.S. FARLEY

PHOTOGRAPHY BY CASPER MONROE

Whether he's "the world's greatest sex hacker," as GQ magazine describes him, or "the world's unlikeliest porn star," as he describes himself, Kenneth Play undoubtedly has a better job than you do. A bold assertion perhaps, but one I'm willing to make after visiting Kenneth at his workplace. There I found the sexpert wearing only satin skivvies and a smile, up to his elbows in porn star pussy in front of a few dozen paying customers as he demonstrated how to make a woman squirt. (Props to the delightful demonstrator, adult actress Aria Khaide.)

Not only does Kenneth Play teach sex ed for a living; he teaches hands-on sex ed. You won't find the man standing in front of a blackboard pointing at a chalk diagram of a vulva. Instead, he's squeezing together a woman's labia while teaching anatomy, all to increase his students' erotic knowledge—to expand their "cliteracy," as he puts it. On his sex-hacking website, KennethPlay.com, you'll see the man in various stages of undress as he schools his students in the erotic arts: In one video Play is immersed in a rose-petaled bathtub with a naked vixen while lecturing about foreplay; in another he's wearing bikini briefs and ball-gagging a girl as part of his course on kink; and in a third he's sitting on a couch, leather-clad, talking "multiple orgasms" while staring intently into the exposed posterior of a nude beauty on all fours in front of him.

Kenneth laughs when he talks about the feedback he gets regarding those videos. "It's funny," he says. "People will say they went online to masturbate, but then, when they found my videos, they both masturbated and learned something!"

Though the 38-year-old Play has today made a name for himself as one of the country's preeminent sexperts, that fate was far from preordained. A young Kenneth moved to New York City from Hong Kong at just 11 years old, a shy and scrawny kid who saw himself as "lesser than" because he believed all the stereotypes about Asians—for example, that they had small penises. Plus, Kenneth was "super dyslexic," a trait he cheerfully says gave him the "opportunity to master bad English and bad Chinese simultaneously. Learning was actually very challenging for me," he says of his dyslexia, "but that taught me to hack my way through life, which is how I ended up viewing the world. Like, I can't do things the normal way, so how can I do it?"

When he was a sophomore in high school, a teacher's aide made an offhanded, racist remark, stating that "Asians are not meant to be athletes" because people are "born the way they are." It was a shitty comment that Kenneth used as inspiration to "master" his body, eventually making the swim team at his high school and becoming a lifeguard.

"I decided to get really fit because she told me I couldn't," he remembers. "I realized some people don't have a growth mind-set. They just think things are the way they are. That isn't how I viewed the world, because I thought people could change."

For all his wisdom, Kenneth still describes his teenage self as a "super sexually insecure Chinese immigrant." Although he was a lifeguard at age 16, Kenneth didn't lose his virginity until years later, in large part because he was worried that his average-size penis wouldn't be able to satisfy a first girlfriend and feared she might flat-out reject him when he pulled it out. That didn't happen, of course, but even when Kenneth finally shirked the stigma of his virginity, he couldn't shake the idea that he wasn't enough. He remembers a random walk home from school as a teenager, just raging with hormones, thinking to himself that a sex party might be "really fun," but also that there was "no way" he could ever attend one.

Kenneth worked in the fitness industry throughout his twenties and lived a sexually pedestrian lifestyle of serial monogamy, but then, after a "bad breakup," a new online date offered to bring him to a swing party. What should have been a triumph in the young man's sex life, however, turned into a disaster. On the day of the big night, with a scheduled threesome already prearranged, a nervous Kenneth popped an Adderall, on the advice of a pal, in order to get a stack of work done. Little did he know that a side effect of those pills can be "impotence."

"That first party experience was disastrous because I could not get my dick hard," he remembers earnestly. "Imagine [spending] your whole life imagining all these shit moments you could have at sex, and I was confronted by it for real!"

Kenneth recalls removing himself from that thwarted threesome to go to the bathroom, where he tried to give himself a "mirror pep talk" and literally slap his dick awake. It didn't happen, thanks to the Adderall. The party wasn't a complete loss, however, as Play recognized how much he loved the scene and how "organic" it felt to him. Then, with the worst already having happened and because he "loves boobies," Kenneth shyly approached a woman with a wonderful pair and timidly told her how wonderful they were.

"Oh, honey," she said warmly, before grabbing his head to give him the "motorboat of a lifetime." It was right then, Kenneth says of getting bounced between that lady's bodacious tatas, that Play had an epiphany. "I thought, I am never going to cock-block myself ever again. I realized if I don't ask for what I want, then I'm already the first person rejecting me."

Play loved the environment at that sex party. He says his affinity for it was such that he decided then and there that he needed to learn "everything about sex," that he would "nerd out" and "tiger mom" himself to become a sex overachiever. He decided that how he had transformed his body for fitness was how he would transform it for sex, through hard work, study and practice.

The problem was that Kenneth couldn't find the information he needed to turn himself into a sex god. There seemed to be no practical material to help a young man get better in bed. "There was no evidence-based learning in the world of sex," he says, "no 'monkey see, monkey do' that would allow me to improve."

On his quest to become a great lay, Kenneth did discover a great deal of serious sex research, but it was mostly concepts and diagrams that had little utilitarian purpose; it did not show someone how to become a better lover. Of course, there was also a whole lot of porn to watch, but Kenneth equates trying to improve one's sex life by imitating porn stars to attempting to learn to drive by watching The Fast and the Furious.

Play decided the best way for him to learn would be his very own "monkey see, monkey do." After breaking up with the woman who brought him to that first orgy—the problem was that she only wanted to go to sex clubs occasionally—Play become a devotee of New York City's swing parties, describing himself as being "very dedicated" to the scene. It was there that he became a serious student of sex, calling himself a "super nerd" who would approach people—after their fucking was finished, of course—to pester them with questions.

"I had no ego, so I'd be the guy who would come up to people at parties after I saw them do something cool, and I'd ask them stuff," he explains. "So like with squirting, I was aggregating all the data from people who were really good at it, and though they all did it differently, I was able to find the common threads they shared." >>

Through diligent study and hard work—practice, practice, practice!—Kenneth became an expert at making a woman ejaculate, and a party producer soon asked him to do a presentation on the topic. While he was initially skeptical of the idea, he agreed to skillshare because he already had a teaching methodology in place based on his previous career in fitness.

"That first class I just lined everything up like in the fitness world," Kenneth says, "and step-by-step I found I could instantly turn a non-squirter into a squirter. I just thought, Wow, I'm not exactly sure what it is, but there's something here."

That "something" was a career in sex hacking, a concept that means producing better results through better knowledge and which—though it sounds New Age—is actually an idea that has stood the test of time. In India, for instance, the Kama Sutra is nothing but an exhaustive, illustrated sex hack manual, while the traditional breathing techniques of the Daoists in China are another. Maybe the most famous sex hack occurred during the Victorian age, when technological advances led to the invention of the vibrator, a discovery Play describes as a "labor-saving device" that may well have led to more female orgasms than anything else, ever.

Since dedicating himself to the study of sex, Kenneth has done professional tantra training and worked with experts such as sex researcher and writer Dr. Zhana Vrangalova of New York University and Pamela Madsen, founder of Back to the Body, a retreat promoting "sexological bodywork." He's also experimented with many, many women, including the more than 600 he's played with personally and the 400 more he's worked with professionally. In 2015, per a friend's suggestion, Kenneth posted some instructional squirting videos to Pornhub. Though shot on a handheld camera, with relatively low production values, those how-to videos have so far been viewed more than 8 million times.

Today he is both a cofounder of Brooklyn's polyamorous, sex-positive Hacienda club—not to mention an eager participant in its many play parties—and a well-known sex educator. He has more than 70 instructional videos online, short films that teach students about topics ranging from fingering to foreplay, oral to anal, multiple orgasms, squirting, penetration and kink. Kenneth also offers erotic coaching, where the man doesn't just teach couples about sex but joins them in the bedroom to do so—not as an active participant in the fun, mind you, but rather as a sexual guide, offering wisdom and advice. A regular three-hour coaching session runs clients a cool $1,000 (Kenneth says most end up hiring him three times on average), but he also offers a more high-end option at $10,000 for people who basically want their own sexual concierge. For that price, Kenneth does things like sex toy shopping, kink room creation or even the design and development of a whole new sex life if so desired.

The goal of Play's sex ed work is to help people, mostly men, "unlearn awful sex myths" through "science-based sex hacks…that make an amazing lover." An important element of his teaching theory is that Play just doesn't tell dudes how to become a better lover; he shows them. His instructions regarding going down on a lady, for instance, aren't all talk, but rather the sharing of theory before Play face-plants into the closest appropriate pudendum, thus illustrating to interested viewers what suction, kisses, nibbles and flicks are needed to provide a woman with a satisfying oral experience. Play then oversees his students' attempts at cunnilingus as well, looking over their shoulders to ensure that the efforts of those less-experienced lovers produce the desired results. It's all part of the erotic philosophy that Play espouses, where what is most important in a man's quest to please a woman is his willingness to work, study and learn.

"Everyone's always so worried about how big their dick is, how long they can stay hard or how much they can jackhammer a woman, but the experience of good sex is so much more than just those things," Kenneth says. "Looking back, my problem was…how I conducted myself."

Astrid, a young woman who recently slept with Play, describes herself as a "size queen" who mostly likes big, brawny men. Nonetheless she calls Kenneth "one of my favorite lovers of all time. I didn't expect to like it so much," she laughs. "He gave me a superintense orgasm within three minutes, and I was just like, what? No one had ever done that in such a short period of time before."

As for Aria Khaide, the delicious model at the female ejaculation class this intrepid reporter attended on HUSTLER's behalf, consider that even though Kenneth and Aria had never met before the night of the class, >> and even though he was experimenting on her in a dark basement in front of the ogling eyes of some 37 people, within 15 minutes of the presentation's start, Kenneth had Aria squirting—by unofficial count—a good half a dozen times. He made her squirt when she was lying on her back, made her squirt when she was sitting up, made her squirt when she was on her knees. Kenneth made Aria squirt by playing with her clit and by playing with her vagina, using both sex toys and his bare hands, and made her squirt through manipulation both external and internal.

"I wasn't expecting ejaculation through internal play," Aria said, "but he hit the spot nicely every time he tried, by my count leading to six squirting orgasms."

More than just highlighting Kenneth's personal abilities to make magic, the class was also tremendously effective for the audience. One beautiful redhead who attended, for example, emailed later that night to say that as soon as she got home, her date used the wisdom he had gleaned from Kenneth to make her squirt not once, not twice, but ten explosive times. Ten!

So, in the interest of orgasms everywhere, we asked Play to provide our readers with specific tips and advice. Read the below carefully, and enjoy your homework. H

- To please a woman, listen to the "clit clock," not the "dick clock."
- Along those same lines, it takes time for the clitoris to become engorged, so be sure the lady boner is present before you attempt penetration.
- The G spot responds more to pressure than friction, so a nice firm massage of the upper wall is more effective than just jabbing at the opening of the vagina.
- Erotic context matters: Sometimes people get bogged down by the mechanics of sex and forget to set the mood.
- Especially when you're trying to introduce a new sexual experience, making your partner feel safe isn't just important; it's required. Try saying, "Hey, I want to try something new, but we can go at your pace, and if you decide to change your mind, I'll happily stop."
- Communication hack: Ask for a specific type of feedback from a lover. Instead of just inquiring, "Does this feel good?" ask, "Do you want more pressure or less?" or "Do you want me to slow down or go faster?" That way the feedback provided will give you a direct action to take.
- Remember, one of the beautiful things about female orgasm is that the first orgasm is just a warm-up. Especially with the G spot, between internal and external stimulations, you can rotate back and forth and just keep the O-train rolling.
- A good way to start touching your lover is in layers—build the anticipation. Tease with touches over the clothes, then work your way down layer by layer.
- Invaluable advice: At a sex party, after taking off a lady's lingerie, don't lose it! It's likely new and expensive.
- When it comes to making a woman squirt, use a puppy pad. You might think that's funny, but it's easier than washing a bunch of towels.
- Remember, pain gets some people in the mood. And, yes, even if pain gets some people in the mood, be sure to receive consent first!

I've been to 29 countries and counting, and I never ride carnival rides because I've almost died on them twice! I really love kissing women, and I do love a pretty cock. It turns me on to see how hard it gets for me. Crazy story: I once went to a sex party with a girlfriend of mine. It was black tie, and everyone wore masks and sipped champagne. During the live performance, I was so turned on that I asked one of the men to fuck me in front of everyone while a gorgeous girl sat on my face." —Emily

I started my career as a model, but now I prefer to be behind the camera. I didn't grow up thinking I wanted to be a porn star, but I've made a great life! My husband is also in the industry, and I enjoy producing his work. A lot of people assume our personal life is crazy, but we're actually very domestic. We like snuggling on the couch, spending time with our child, watching British TV or cooking meals. I LOVE dachshunds—I have a mini sausage, Mr. Junior, who is now ten years old, and I HATE Marmite. Oh, and my favorite body part is my butt." —Sophia

Fun facts: I can't stand bacon, and I'm allergic to weed. But I like Pokemon, watching anime, drawing stuff or streaming Fortnite on Twitch. I spend a lot of time indoors—love listening to music like alt-J, Smash Mouth and the Red Hot Chili Peppers.

"In high school there were boys who would call me a slut. And now that I'm a pro slut, they're all in my DMs, begging for a text back! In ten years I'd still like to be doing porn. I think it's a great job, and I like that it brought me to L.A. Of course, another reason I like porn is the wild sex. In my real life I don't fuck guys I don't know. I prefer intimacy. I want to kiss and look into a lover's eyes. But when I'm working, I'm open to trying out new things and getting roughed up. Porn unleashes a different side of my sexuality, and I love it!"

A sexually active woman told her plastic surgeon that she wanted her vaginal lips reduced in size because they were too loose and floppy. Out of embarrassment, she insisted that the procedure be kept a secret, and the surgeon agreed.

After the operation the woman awoke from the anesthesia and found three roses carefully placed beside her on the bed. Outraged, she summoned the surgeon. “I thought I told you not to tell anyone about my surgery!” she snapped. “Where did these roses come from?!”

The doctor said that he had carried out her wish for confidentiality and that the first rose was from him. “I felt sad,” he explained, “because you went through all this by yourself. The second rose was from my nurse. She assisted me and empathized because she had the same procedure done some time ago.”

“And the third rose?” the woman asked.

“That’s from a patient upstairs in the burn unit,” the surgeon replied. “He wanted to thank you for his new ears.”

As Professor Anderson was wrapping up class, he reminded his students about their final exam. “There will be no excuses for not showing up tomorrow,” he sternly warned, “barring a serious medical condition or the death of a family member.”

A smartass male student stood up and asked, “What about extreme sexual exhaustion?”

The entire class burst into laughter.

Once the laughter subsided, Professor Anderson glared at the student and bellowed, “That’s not an excuse! You can use your other hand to write.”

Question: What do tofu and a dildo have in common?

Answer: Both are excellent meat substitutes.

A man in his 40s and a younger woman were having a romantic dinner in an upscale restaurant. They were gazing lovingly at each other and holding hands. While taking an order at another table, the waitress noticed the woman slowly sliding down her chair, but the man didn’t seem to notice. He was staring straight ahead in a daze.

The waitress watched as the woman slid out of sight beneath the table. Thinking this behavior a bit risqué and worried that it might offend other diners, the waitress went over to the lovebirds’ table. “Pardon me, sir,” she said, “but I think your wife just slid under the table.”

The man calmly looked up at her and muttered, “No, she didn’t. My wife just walked in.”

While being evaluated at a mental asylum, a new patient asked a psychiatrist, “How do you determine if a person needs to be institutionalized?”

The shrink responded, “First we fill up a bathtub and offer a teaspoon, a teacup and a bucket. Then we ask the patient to empty the bathtub.”

“I guess I won’t be here very long,” the new patient smugly remarked. “A normal person would use the bucket because it’s bigger than the spoon or cup.”

The psychiatrist just smiled and said, “You’re wrong. A normal person would pull the plug. So do you want a bed near the window?”

THE TRULY FILTHY FILTHY RICH

JEFFREY EPSTEIN, ET AL.

HUSTLER'S RESIDENT CONSPIRACY EXPERT EXPLORES THE LINK BETWEEN THE RICH AND POWERFUL AND SEXUAL BLACKMAIL OPS.

When convicted sex offender Jeffrey Epstein was found dead in his New York City jail cell last August, shock waves rippled across the nation, though many were not surprised. Facing the rest of his life behind bars, Epstein was reportedly going to cooperate with prosecutors, hoping for another leniency deal, meaning that he'd likely roll over on his whole clientele of elite johns. Prince Andrew, Bill Clinton, Ehud Barak and many others, known and unknown, logged time on his "Lolita Express" jet plane or in his many luxurious homes. We still don't know who exactly among them enjoyed the forbidden fruits Epstein offered, because now there will be no trial.

After the medical examiner ruled that Epstein had hung himself, many smelled a rat, including mainstream media journalists and pundits who routinely ridicule "conspiracy theories." In the weeks that followed, more details surfaced, rendering the official verdict ever more implausible. >>

Two weeks before his death, Epstein had been found unconscious with bruises on his neck while sharing a cell with a beefcake convicted killer named Nick Tartaglione. The authorities never clarified whether this was a suicide attempt or if the muscular cellmate had assaulted him (Tartaglione has denied any malfeasance), but they transferred Epstein to a Special Housing Unit cell for suicidal or problematic prisoners. He was supposed to have shared that cell with another inmate 24/7—who managed somehow to be absent on the night Epstein died. He was scheduled to have been checked on every 30 minutes by the guards on night shift, but they supposedly fell asleep and falsified their records. One of them was not even a licensed correctional officer, but a substitute.

Furthermore, Epstein's cell was designed to prevent hanging, with no fixtures or knobs that could be used to secure a homemade noose. Theoretically, he used a flimsy blanket to fashion a noose, secured it to the top rail or post of the bunk bed, then leaped off in a very short cannonball dive to the floor, exerting enough force to break multiple bones in his neck, including the hyoid bone. Such injuries are more typical of strangulation, say experienced coroners like Cyril Wecht, and relatively rare in hangings, especially ones from such a low height.

That Special Housing Unit was monitored by the usual array of video cameras in high-security jails, so what did they show? Initially we were told that all the relevant footage was "unusable," but not how or why it was unusable. Now we're told the same "negligent" guards accidentally erased the relevant tapes. Unless you're fond of buying bridges in the desert, the three-strikes rule should apply here: Two convenient coincidences are plausible, but three or more beg for justifiable suspicion.

Epstein's attorneys have disputed the coroner's verdict, noting that far from being despondent and hopeless, he was optimistic that he could assert a double jeopardy defense based on his prior conviction in 2008, and because they were preparing an appeal of his bail denial. An independent pathologist hired by the family, Michael Braden, attended the autopsy and reportedly told Epstein's brother, Mark, that he noted unexplained contusions on both of Epstein's wrists, a bruise on his left forearm and hemorrhaging in his left shoulder. Other prisoners have stated they heard screams that night. All of this compelling evidence should lead any reasonable person to a presumption of murder over suicide, but the latter option has never even been seriously considered by the investigating authorities.

Ostensibly shocked by the death of this famous prisoner while in protective custody, Attorney General William Barr vowed a thorough investigation to uncover the truth. That was in September of 2019. So far, the two jail guards have been arrested for dereliction of duty, and that's the sum of it. No accounting for the incredible string of anomalies. And Epstein's acknowledged collaborator, Ghislaine Maxwell, who is said to have procured most of his underage girls, is living scot-free somewhere, with no indictments or Interpol warrants out for her arrest. Why not?

What secrets went to the grave with Epstein? In my opinion, it's a lot deeper than a bunch of rich geezers getting their rocks off with jailbait. I would contend that the Epstein case is the latest installment in a long series of sexual blackmail ops run by intelligence agencies and organized crime. A clue can be found in how the former U.S. attorney in Florida, Alex Acosta, excused the sweetheart deal he arranged for Epstein's 2008 conviction. The deal allowed the offender to escape for 12 hours every day to a swank Miami apartment for "work release" and guaranteed no prosecution for his collaborators, without informing the victims of the deal, as required by law. In an interview with the Trump transition team, Acosta stated that he was told by higher-ups Epstein "belonged to intelligence."

We know from Virginia Giuffre, one of the underage girls ensnared by Epstein and Ghislaine Maxwell, and from Maria Farmer, who has accused Epstein of sexually assaulting her, that his Manhattan mansion was wired with surveillance cameras in every room. According to Ms. Farmer, she once asked Epstein, "Are you recording all this [the sexual escapades]?" and he replied, "Yes. We keep it. We keep everything." Police searched his Palm Beach home in 2005 and found more secret cameras. It has been speculated that Epstein stashed all of these recordings in a safe on his bizarre Little Saint James island. Yet Barr waited over a whole month after Epstein's arrest to raid it—after the accused was safely in his grave and there would be no trial and public submission of the possible evidence. This comes as no surprise, as William Barr, whose first job was with the CIA, is reported to have acted as the agency's cover-up consigliere from whitewashing the Iran-contra affair to covering up the PROMIS software theft scandal. His father, Donald Barr, gave Epstein his first job, teaching at the elite private Dalton School, despite Epstein never having completed a college degree.

Epstein's main accomplice, Ghislaine Maxwell, is the daughter of the deceased Robert Maxwell, the powerful Jewish publishing titan in Britain who mysteriously fell to his death off a private yacht in 1991. Robert Maxwell was widely suspected to have acted as a secret agent for Israel's Mossad intelligence agency; he was so accused in Parliament by George Galloway, and renowned journalist Seymour Hersh corroborated the accusation in his book The Samson Option. Robert Maxwell was given a state funeral in Israel, attended by no less than six former and acting chiefs of Israeli intelligence. Ghislaine was the apple of his eye, his favorite child; he even named his yacht the Lady Ghislaine. Former CIA agents Robert David Steele and Phillip Giraldi have speculated that she, like her father, was acting as a secret agent for Israel.

Corroboration that Epstein and Maxwell may have been running a blackmail operation comes from former Israeli Military Intelligence officer Ari Ben-Menashe, in an interview with former CBS News executive producer Zev Shalev. When Shalev stated, "But, you know, for most people it's hard for them to think of Israel as being…blackmailing their leaders in the United States," Ben-Menashe replied, "You're kidding? [laughs]. It was quite their M.O. Sleeping around is not a crime. It may be embarrassing, but it's not a crime. But sleeping with underage girls is a crime…so he [Epstein] made sure these girls were underage."

Israel at first attempted to "plausibly deny" that Ben-Menashe had ever worked for Israeli intelligence, but journalist Robert Parry uncovered documents allegedly proving that Ben-Menashe had indeed served Israeli intelligence in "key positions" and executed "complex and sensitive assignments." In 2012, as Ben-Menashe was preparing to fly from Canada to the U.S. to meet with Parry for further revelations, his Montreal home was fire-bombed, completely destroying it. This could understandably be interpreted as a clear warning to shut up, but Ben-Menashe has not remained silent.

This would not be the first time that American politicians and public figures have fallen into the "honeypot"—the classic spook agency tactic to lure targets into sexually compromising acts and then blackmailing them. Chile-based journalist Whitney Webb has produced the best history of these operations in her groundbreaking MintPressNews.com series "Too Big to Fail."According to this series, the CIA has long operated a number of honeypots in Washington, D.C., to get dirt on foreign diplomats. Organized crime was known to employ the same trap. This sordid history goes back to J. Edgar Hoover and Joseph McCarthy's infamous sidekick lawyer Roy Cohn, who later worked for none other >> than Donald Trump. According to Anthony Summers, author of the Hoover biography Official and Confidential, J. Edgar, who was said to collect dirt on nearly every politician in America, was thoroughly compromised himself after mob boss Meyer Lansky obtained compromising photos of him in bed with his longtime partner, FBI Deputy Director Clyde Tolson. One Lansky confederate was bootlegger Lew Rosenstiel, whose fourth wife, Susan Kaufman, states that her husband hosted parties for prominent government officials featuring "boy prostitutes," the rooms bugged with microphones. Kaufman recalls, "I heard Rosenstiel say that if Hoover ever brings pressure against Lansky or any of us, we'll use this as blackmail."

Ms. Kaufman describes one of the "blackmail parties" she attended as featuring J. Edgar in drag, with several underage boys offered for the enjoyment of Hoover, Rosenstiel and Roy Cohn. Former NYPD detective James Rothstein says that he once interrogated Cohn and Cohn confessed he was running a blackmail op. "Cohn's job was to run the little boys," explains Rothstein. "Say you had an admiral, a general, a congressman, who did not want to go along with the program. Cohn's job was to set them up. Then they would go along. Cohn told me that himself." But Roy Cohn had many powerful friends, including former CIA directors, Ronald and Nancy Reagan, Barbara Walters and media lords like Rupert Murdoch and Mort Zuckerman.

According to fellow agent/whistleblower Frank Terpil, former CIA agent Edwin Wilson was another blackmailer: "One of Wilson's agency jobs was to subvert members of both houses [of Congress] by any means necessary," Terpil asserted. "Certain people could be easily coerced by living out their sexual fantasy in the flesh…. A remembrance of these occasions [was] permanently recorded via selected cameras…. The technicians in charge of filming…[were] TSD [Technical Services Division of the CIA]."

Yet another spider weaving this web was said to be former ABC News correspondent and Republican lobbyist Craig Spence. In 1989, The Washington Times broke the story that Spence had been pimping out underage boys to "government officials, U.S. military officers, businessmen, lawyers, bankers, congressional aides, media representatives and other professionals" in his home and special apartments bugged with audiovisual recording equipment and even a two-way mirror. Spence's clients and friends included former CIA director William Casey, Ted Koppel, Eric Severeid, William Safire, Elliot Richardson, and commandant of the Marine Corps, General Alfred M. Gray. It is unknown how many of these "clients" availed themselves of Spence's special party favors. According to the Times article, Spence "often boasted that he was working for the CIA and on one occasion said he was going to disappear for a while 'because he had an important CIA assignment.'" Reportedly Spence worried "that the CIA might double-cross him and kill him instead and then make it look like a suicide." On November 10, 1989, Spence was found dead in the Boston Ritz-Carlton hotel, his death quickly ruled a suicide. Starting to sound familiar?

Spence's downfall led the bloodhounds to an affiliated child-trafficking ring, nicknamed "Bodies by God," said to be run by another Republican lobbyist, Larry King, in Omaha. Nebraska chief investigator Gary Caradori claimed he found evidence that Larry King's Franklin Credit Union was being used by the CIA to launder money for the Iran-contra operation and that he was also trafficking children from the Omaha Boy's Town orphanage to sexually service important political leaders. The investigator even alleged that former CIA director and then President George H.W. Bush was among them. Caradori told his wife that he had obtained photographs to prove the allegations, but on a flight from Chicago to Nebraska, his private plane exploded and crashed. The photos were not found, and the investigation was subsequently squelched.

In a documentary film about the scandal, Conspiracy of Silence, Nebraska state senator Loren Schmit stated, "I was very disappointed with the way the FBI and law enforcement treated the victims. They in fact turned them into the offenders, so to speak…they seemed to bear down and try to get the victims to change their story." Another Nebraska state senator, John DeCamp, penned a scathing book about the scandal, The Franklin Cover-up: Child Abuse, Satanism, and Murder in Nebraska. According to journalist Wayne Madsen, investigator Caradori's plane was sabotaged and former CIA director William Colby, a friend of Senator DeCamp, was ready to expose the CIA's use of child prostitutes for political and diplomatic blackmail when he died in a suspicious canoeing accident in Chesapeake Bay.

Across the pond, in 1996 the entire country of Belgium was rocked by the scandal of convicted pedophile Marc Dutroux, who, after being paroled, kidnapped, raped and murdered girls from ages eight to nine, while benignly ignored by the BOB (Belgian FBI). One of the anonymous victims, known only as X1, testified that "In Brussels there was a villa in which a room was set up with built-in cameras. Even in the 1970s these cameras were so discrete that only the people who maintained them and the child prostitutes knew where they were located.... Why did I [have] to get those guys clearly in the picture, why was I supposed to get them to hit me and brutally rape me.... Blackmail, the word that was never mentioned; I only started to really understand when I was 13, 14 years old..." Dutroux languished in jail, without being brought to trial, until 300,000 Belgian citizens staged a mass protest. Families of the victims claim that Dutroux's child-trafficking network was servicing high-ranking Flemish politicians and justice officials, hence the heel-dragging on prosecuting him. Brussels, of course, is the administrative capital of the E.U.

In 2012 a documentary film exposed deceased media star Jimmy Savile, the Captain Kangaroo of the U.K., as a probable serial pedophile and rapist throughout his 60-year career, with victims ranging from age eight to 47. Scotland Yard recorded an astonishing 450 complaints against Savile; yet he was never investigated or charged while he was alive for what may be a world record of serial sex abuse. The BBC had independently investigated Savile, even composing a documentary about his crimes, but never broadcast it—perhaps because Savile was a regular visitor at Buckingham Palace, hobnobbing with Prince Charles and other British politicians and celebrities. Shades of Prince Andrew and Jeffrey Epstein. Somehow such crimes seem to have become one of the special privileges of corrupt elite.

For too long child traffickers and blackmailers have been tolerated and protected—just like Bill Cosby, Harvey Weinstein, Bill O'Reilly, Jimmy Savile and so many other sexual predators enjoyed decades-long sprees with immunity. It's time to root out child-trafficking networks and expose them for the monstrosities they are. Our prisons are teeming with inmates who possess a common history: physical or sexual abuse as children. We cannot—must not—tolerate the exploitation of children, whether in elite circles, criminal networks or intelligence agencies.

MY WIFE & I TRIED DP

HUSTLER VIDEO. DIRECTOR: B. SKOW. STARRING: LAUREN PHILLIPS, KEIRA CROFT, LENA PAUL, QUINTON JAMES, WILL POUNDER, STIRLING COOPER, ALEX MAC, KYLE MASON & JASON MOODY.

As any self-help book will tell you, sharing is key to a happy marriage. Usually they're talking about sharing emotions, but judging by My Wife and I Tried DP, sharing the little missus with another cock goes a long way toward spreading happiness. This video is structured as a quasi-documentary. Couples divulge their experiences with double penetration and extol its union-strengthening virtues before engaging in dramatic reenactments. It's an interesting conceit and convincingly delivered—which would mean little if the sex wasn't hot. Luckily, a lot of thrills get packed into this offering. Cute, bright-eyed brunette Keira Croft comes on to her husband's friend during a get-together, leading to a playful threeway. Their cocks crowd Croft's mouth like commuters jam-packed into a New York subway car before they play a round of rock paper scissors to determine who gets first crack at Croft's dung hatch. Croft's eyes threaten to pop out of her head as the double penetration ensues and the pair of stiff pricks jam her pussy and asshole fast enough to start a campfire. Busty amazon Lauren Phillips comes off like a debased Jessica Rabbit who really is bad and not just drawn that way—and yes, that's a good thing. Dirty-blond minx Lena Paul takes her double-dicking so ferociously that a thick, ropy vein protrudes from her forehead. To double your fun, order My Wife and I Tried DP. Call 800-763-8271 ext. 7651, or visit HustlerStore.com today. —Pico D. Ribibi

If Netflix's dystopian drama Black Mirror has taught us anything, it's that technology has the potential to fuck us harder than Manuel Ferrara on a Cialis bender. The all-female offering Dark Mirror raises similar concerns…along with viewers' pricks. Broken into four segments, each addressing what the future might hold due to advancing technology, the video starts off with a relatively innocuous scenario. Weary of her boring, bickering family, pretty brunette Adria Rae takes refuge in the comfort of her virtual-reality headset. Transported to an otherworldly environment, Rae enjoys the services of her virtual sexmates, Asian sexpot Vina Sky and blonde Scarlett Sage. Eventually the trio forms a virtual asshole buffet as all three take turns lovingly tongue-fucking the others' bungs. Were this an actual episode of Black Mirror, it probably would have ended with Rae trapped in a science-induced hell. As it is, the only messy aftermath will occur in your lap. A later segment, "Sex Worker," envisions a future where prostitutes have been replaced by AI whores and taps a little deeper into technology's ability to impact the human condition. Summoned by Abigail Mac for a sex session, quasi-hooker Tiffany Watson uses her futuristic skills in an effort to determine what's bothering her troubled client. Eventually she deduces that Mac is haunted by carnal feelings for her sister and, through a bit of computer-aided sexual surrogate therapy, helps Mac face her demons head-on and lick what's bothering her. Sexy and thought-provoking, Dark Mirror is well worth looking into. —P.D.R.

WICKED PICTURES. DIRECTOR: AXEL BRAUN. STARRING: KENZIE TAYLOR, GINA VALENTINA, BUNNY COLBY, SAILOR LUNA, RAMON NOMAR, RYAN MCLANE, LOGAN PIERCE & SETH GAMBLE.

No doubt about it, after decades of smooth-shorn porn-star crotches, pubic hair is in a growth phase. Axel Braun's Bush 3 invites viewers to break out their meat machetes and take a few whacks as they explore the jungle. Sexy brunette Gina Valentina's bush is deliciously dark and thick. Her scenemate runs his fingers through her fun-forest before giving her a spirited drilling, tugging at her pubes and eventually milking his load onto her snatch patch. Gazing upon Kenzie Taylor's nebulously shaped pussy pelt is a little like examining a cloud as it drifts and morphs above you. Is it a disintegrating heart? A flock of sparrows assembling? A bat spreading its wings? It's an entertaining endeavor, though one that distracts from the task at cock-gripping hand. Was buxom blond bombshell Bunny Colby a last-minute replacement? She sports the scraggly equivalent of three-day stubble between her legs, like she was called in before she could sprout full coverage. If anything, future installments in this series should go even further. As pube acceptance continues to spread, let's see Rapunzel-like locks flowing from between the performers' legs. Pubes long enough to do macrame with. Bush 3 offers something to beat around, but there's plenty of room left for growth. —P.D.R.

HUSTLER CLASSIC
PHOTOGRAPHY BY CLIVE McLEAN

You don't want to know what goes on in my head," warns Mia. "It's scary in there sometimes." Mia laughs nervously. "I mean, my sexual fantasies are seriously perverse. If HUSTLER tried to print pictures of the filth I think of when I play with myself, you'd all wind up in jail."

Mia finally cracks a sly smile. "That's why I got into porn. If I didn't have some kind of outlet for my fucked-up thoughts, I'd probably explode."
